COMMUNITY TESTING FOR TUBERCULOSIS IN LIVESTOCK DISEASE WORK.

It is highly desirable that all animal disease work undertaken by county agents be of a demonstration character and that the work be done with the advice and cooperation of skilled veterinarians and the proper livestock disease control officers participating. This has been well managed in tuberculosis testing in Box Elder, Carbon, Morgan, Salt Lake, San Juan, Summit, Tooele, Utah, Wasatch, and Weber Counties, Utah. The county agents in the above counties and the local extension committees have assisted in getting the cattle of the locality assembled in one centrally located corral where an authorized officer of the state or Government injected the serum. Seventy-two hours later the cattle were returned to the same place for examination. A small percentage of reactors were found in all counties. A total of 16,734 head were tested. Similar practices were followed in connection with the treatment of blackleg. Such a plan as this not only conserves the time and energy of the extension agents, ranchers and control officers, but makes a demonstration of value to the whole community of what is too often simply personal service work.
